Americans Choose Gold as the Best Long-Term Investment

Men, seniors, middle-income Americans, and Republicans are more enamored with gold
by Dennis Jacobe, Chief Economist

PRINCETON, NJ -- Thirty-four percent of Americans say gold is the best long-term investment, more than say so about four other types of investments. Real estate (19%) and stocks (17%) are distant second choices.

Gold rallied to a record this week as rising government debt burdens and weakening currencies boosted demand for a haven. Photographer: Guenter Schiffmann/Bloomberg

Central banks, net buyers of gold for the first time in a generation, are likely to retain their holdings even if they need to raise cash to counter an escalating debt crisis, according to Morgan Stanley.

"Once they've sold, that's it, and buying back would be extremely expensive," Peter Richardson, chief metals economist at Morgan Stanley Australia Ltd., said in an interview. "They would rather have the backing of a rising asset within their reserve portfolios than use it to reduce debt."

Gold rallied to a record this week as rising government debt burdens and weakening currencies boosted demand for a haven. Central banks are the biggest gold holders, and Thailand, South Korea, Kazakhstan, Mexico and Russia added to reserves this year. The precious metal is the "currency of the world" amid the debt crisis, economist Dennis Gartman wrote Aug. 19.

"Under conditions of austerity we're going to see a further deterioration of debt," said Richardson, who has studied metals markets for 20 years. "Rising risk argues in favor of holding on to their gold reserves rather than selling them because they've only got one shot at selling."

Immediate-delivery gold, which has rallied 30 percent this year, touched an all-time high of $1,913.50 per ounce yesterday and was at $1,846.07 by 12:02 p.m. in London. The metal may reach $2,000 by the end of the year, according to the median forecast in a Bloomberg survey of 13 traders and analysts at a conference in Kovalam in South India on Aug. 20.
